The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower is servant to the lender. The rich ruleth over the poor. Let it be the rule of order, exercised in kindness; not of pride and oppression (James 2:6). The capitalist often exercises an iron control over his workmen, as if they were so many soulless machines for producing wealth for himself.

Proverbs 22:7 - The rich rules... - Verse-by-Verse Commentary

With the 28/36 rule, you'll want your PITI number to be less than 28% of your gross monthly income. Use this formula to find out exactly how much house you can afford. For example, if your gross monthly income amounts to $4,000 / month, the best mortgage you're likely to attain would amount to no more than $1,120 / month since that's 28% of your income.

We now focus on a section of the Gospel that deals with the question of wealth in relation to the kingdom of heaven. The passage includes a confrontation between Jesus and a rich young man, and then the teaching of Jesus on the subject. The tone for the message is set by the little incident that comes before this material, the blessing of the children (19:13-15).
